Mr. Tiphagne told The Hindu that the award cannot be seen as a recognition of his individual efforts, but for the collective work in defending human rights he had been part of with like-minded activists and victims of human rights abuse over the years.

He said that at a time when there were several challenges to the principles of dissent and democracy in the country, he was humbled to receive this award in the name of a person who fought for these principles in the courts of law.

“The award is also a boost for continuing the fight for dissent, democracy and human rights not only in the courts of law, but also on the streets,” he added.

The award will be presented on the occasion of the 16th Nani A. Palkhiwala Memorial Lecture to be delivered by Justice R.F. Nariman, Judge, Supreme Court of India, on December 15, 2018 in Mumbai. Mr. Tiphagne has previously received the Amnesty International's Human Rights Award in the year 2016.
